OnlyFans Sexually Explicit Content Ban Is Crypto's Biggest Opportunity

The online subscription platform known for adult content, "OnlyFans" is planning to ban sexually explicit videos. The new policy will take effect on October 1, 2021, and is the result of pressure from partners, banks and firms that handle their financial transactions.

OnlyFans has become infamous, as a space for celebrities and influencers to interact with people on a personal level, as well as a place where sex workers seek to earn money from performances and online connections.

The ban attracted the attention of the Bitcoin and crypto industry, which could lead to increasingly consumer-friendly crypto payment options, and the creation of a platform that will not disintegrate under the influence, and rule, of payment providers.

OnlyCoins has an opportunity to swoop in to support sex workers and online creators. The porn industry has been embracing crypto payments and there is a chance the project could be in the perfect place to fill the void left by OnlyFans' exit, and grow into a more dynamic, inclusive platform, that goes all-in on cryptocurrency.

OnlyCoins, a digital content marketplace, allows creators to sell content freely as long as it complies with legislation. Users can receive funds directly and instantly from supporters via cryptocurrency. Creators can earn Bitcoin Cash (BCH), Bitcoin (BTC), Ethereum (ETH), Binance Coin (BNB), DOGE, Litecoin (LTC), Monero (XMR), DASH, Uniswap (UNI), Flex USD, and more currencies coming, by posting content and gathering subscribers. Users can receive funds directly from supporters, giving a mere 10% commission to the platform.

The OnlyCoins' commission rate outperforms all the fee models on popular sites like OnlyFans (20%), ManyVids (30%), PornHub (32%), and Clips4Sale (40%).

Registering for OnlyCoins.app requires only an email to get started.
